Mrs. Booth at Glen Ridge.

Those who went to the Glen Ridge Church last Sunday evening to hear Mrs. Ballington Booth enjoyed a rare treat which they will long remember. Long before the hour of service the seats in the church were taken and many who came before the hour announced for the opening of the service were compelled to crat for many years. go away without gaining admittance to dred more stood during the entire eveas a public speaker cannot be exagger ated. There is the personal attractiveness of manner, grace of gesture, and beauty of countenance which would attract any audience even though the sub- to put up the best man they have to best ject matter of her address were less pleasing and weighty. But in addition to all these she possesses rare oratorical gifts. Her language is simple, choice, graceful and vigorous. Wit, pathos and plain direct appeal come in quick succession and the natural versatility of her mind, her naive power of description, her exquisite sense of beauty are constantly seen in the use of illustrations of the rarest beauty of form and appositeness of idea. To crown all this, the audience felt they were in the presence of a gifted woman who had given her life in sacrifice ship allied with what would be for the to the needs of poor fallen humanity, and best interests of the township are thought Christlike a woman surpassed even the power of Mrs. Booth to hold her bearers ORD it has been thought that for Comby her words.

Every address she makes is a sermon, an appeal for true, Christlike, sincere religion, a vindication of the power of the gospel to "save to the uttermost," and a call to more perfect sacrifice for the Master's name. "I feel so mean and selfish" was the remark most frequently heard after the evening's service was over. The story of a consecrated life, the presence of a consecrated woman were more than eloquence, and everyone who left the church last Sunday evening said in their hearts, "God bless the Salvation Army in its human and redeeming work and make me know more really in daily life the Lord of grace and glory."

Wanted-Real Soldiers.

Mr. Yatman in his address to the Christian Endeavorers emphasised the need in the churches of sincere workers. Mrs. Ballington Booth last Sunday night struck the same chord when she spoke of the necessity for real soldiers. Christians are spoken of as soldiers engaged in a warfare, as having on "the armor of Jesus Christ, with the breast plate of righteousness, the helmet of salvation, shod with the gospel of preparation" and with the sword of truth in their hands. Clad in the armor they are worse than useless if they are not sincere or real in their desire to conquer. They must not waver in their fidelity to the cause and there will be no faltering in the ranks if they really know on which side they are fighting. Soldiers on either side in the Civil War were deadly in earnest and sincere in their desires to win. When Christian soldiers become seized with the same earnestness of purpose, the battlements of sin will not prevail against them.

Mrs. Booth in her talk Sunday night showed how the Salvation Army had fought against all opposition and had prevailed. By her straight for ward story and earnest manner she was enabled to lift it up so high as to gain for it the respect and admiration of the audience.

The workers of the churches should not fail to heed the lesson taught by this earnest and sincere woman of the Salvation Army.

SNYDER-DAY MATTER.

Editor Bloomfield Record:

The so-called explanation of Thos. Day in your issue of last week makes necessary for me to ask room for m reply. Thos. P. The Sandringham Funeral Serme The wide interest taken in the ques-tion of recognition in eternity was illustrated by the extraordinary sale of the sermon preached at Sandringham on the decease of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, the eldest son of the Prince and Princess of Wales. The profits during the short period of months amounted to no less than £1.300, of which the sum of £650 was given by the Princess of Wales to the Gordon Boys' home and £650 to the British Home for Incurables. Over 50,-000 copies were sold in that time-a sale certainly unprecedented in the annals of profit from a single sermon of a few

The preacher has been heard to say that this sale was not due to his slender sermon, but to the touching anecdote told by the princess, forming 'the prefatory note, and which she gave permission to be printed. The substance of the story is that in 1888 all the five children of the princess were with her at Sandringham, and they all partook of holy communion together. "I gave Eddy a little book," said the bereaved mother, "and wrote in it:

"Nothing in my hand I bring, Simply to thy cross I cling. "and also

"Just as I am, without one plea, But that thy blood was shed for me,

O Lamb of God, I come. "When he was gone, and lay like one sleeping," continued the princess. laid a cross of flowers on his breast, and after we had done so I turned to the table at his bedside and saw the little book in which were written these words, and I could not help feeling that he did cling to the cross, and that it had all come true."-Leisure Hour.

Notes About Alligators There is nothing that a 'gator likes better than fresh pork, and he will toddle three miles from water for a Florida rasorback. In cool weather he buries himself in mud and becomes dormant until it grows warm. Hunters still make a living by killing him for his hide and teeth. The killing of alligators from the decks of river steamers in Florida has been stopped by law. Tourists became very careless in their use of firearms, and would endanger the lives of passengers in their haste to get a shot before the boat got by a plump saurian. NEW YORK'S POSTAL SERVICE. Interesting Facts About the Growth of the Delivery System. The fair of the postoffice employees was an incentive to resuscitate and revivify every postal article obtainable that was quaint, ancient, and antique, even to an exhibit of a picture of the building used for the first postoffice. In connection with this might have been mentioned the fact that it was in 1623, nine years after the construction of the first fort at the southern end of Manhattan Island, that the first postoffice saw its beginning. Previous to this, masters of vessel bringing letters from domestic and foreign ports brought them on shore and left them at a coffee house, where the merchants, the burghers and the loungers met to discuss the topics of the day Here the letters were deposited in rack, where they might be obtained by the persons to whom they were adsisted of straggling groups of one story houses with peaked roofs and gable ends fronting the street, and when the city extended no farther north than Wall street, there was the town winding near the Battery, and the government house stood in Water street, near Whitehall It was in this year that the letter carrier first appeared—the lounger who carried the mail to the merchant or burgher. It was not until 1692, however, that the first city postoffice was established, near Bowling green, the postmaster being Richard Nichel.

In 1710 the British postmaster general stablished the general postoffice in this city and ordered that all mails coming by vessels should be sent there. A year later post routes between New York and Boston and New York and Albany were established, and the mails were carried on horseback twice a month. In 1740 a similar route was established between New York and Philadelphia.

In 1758 Benjamin Franklin was an cointed postmaster general of the col onies. Alexander Colden soon after ward succeeded Richard Nichel as post master of the city, which office he held until the beginning of the Revolution, when the postoffice was abolished by the British officials and remained closed for 1786 he was succeeded by Sebastian Barnum, at which time the postal revenue was $2,789, and the city directory contained 926 names only. - New York Trib-

Bound to Say Something. Among other anecdotes of university life Dean Hole tells of an occasion when there was some doubt as to the locality of a city mentioned in a Greek text, and the lecturer addressed a youth who had just come up from the famous Shrewsbury school, "Now, Mr. Bentley, you are a pupil of our great geographer, Dr. Butler, the Atlas of our age, who carries the world not on his shoulders, but in his head, and you can probably enlighten us as to the position of this ancient town." "I believe, sir," was the prompt reply, "that modern travelers are of the opinion that the city ought to be placed about ten miles to the southeast of the spot it now occupies on our map."

After receiving respectful thanks for his information, the informer told Dean Hole as they left the lecture room that he had never heard of the venerable city before, but that for the honor of Shrewsbury and the reputation of Dr. Butler he felt himself bound to say something.
